

California Wildlife

Nature Van Activity

Have you ever seen wild animals in your neighborhood?

There are lots of animals that also make their homes here in California!

California has many different kinds of habitats for animals. A habitat is where the animal can find its food, make its nest or den, and spend most of its time.

A habitat can be dark forests, dry desert, cold mountains, open meadows, or the ocean coast.

Draw an animal that might live in each type of habitat in the boxes below:

The image shows a map of California with the word "CALIFORNIA" written across it. A green star is placed on the northern coast. Three boxes are connected to the map by lines: "Mountain Habitat" is connected to the northern interior, "Desert Habitat" is connected to the eastern interior, and "Ocean Coast Habitat" is connected to the western coast.
